

Whitaker Center Invites Community to Free "Light Up the Night" Event on November 26

Harrisburg, PA - Whitaker Center for Science and the Arts invites the community to "Light Up the Night" on Tuesday, November 26 from 5 to 7pm. This event promises an evening filled with excitement and holiday cheer while providing family-friendly entertainment with free admission and activities. The event begins with the launching of Whitaker Center's new exterior LED pylon lights at approximately 4:45pm outside its main entrance at 222 Market Street in Harrisburg.

Guests of all ages are welcome to explore Whitaker Center, free of charge, including the Animation Academy traveling exhibit which is currently on display. The Sunoco Performance Theater will host hands-on science experiments, while children can unleash their creativity at the Kids Craft sponsored by Better Homes and Gardens. Additionally, there will be free holiday movie viewings, a special appearance by Santa, and an enchanting display of festive trees and tables decorated by community organizations. To add to the merriment, holiday cookies will be available for all to enjoy.

"Whitaker Center is grateful for the ability to offer this free event to our community to both literally and figuratively brighten the holiday season," says Mary Oliveira, President & CEO of Whitaker Center for Science and the Arts. "This is only possible through the support of community partners, like M&T Bank, whose generous contribution has made this event possible. Their commitment to the community helps us create engaging and accessible family-focused events like this one."

Admission to "Light Up the Night" is free; however, tickets are required. To secure your spot, please register online at <https://www.whitakercenter.org/special-events/light-up-the-night> and enjoy this festive opportunity to celebrate the holiday season with Whitaker Center!
